EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This report presents the findings of a comprehensive project stock-taking exercise conducted by the County Government of Bomet covering the period 2013 to 2026.

The exercise was undertaken to establish a complete and consolidated inventory of projects implemented across all departments, assess their status, and evaluate financial performance.

A total of 2,786 projects were identified from the consolidated county dataset, with an estimated total budget of KSh 9,439,774,472, of which KSh 7,862,766,233 has been utilized, leaving a balance of KSh 1,577,008,239.

Analysis of project status indicates that the majority of projects have been completed, demonstrating strong delivery performance across sectors. A smaller proportion of projects are ongoing, stalled, not started, or under procurement, indicating areas where continued follow-up and implementation support is required. The project status distribution is heavily skewed towards completed projects, while budget allocation patterns indicate concentration in infrastructure intensive sectors, particularly Roads, Water, and Lands.

The findings show that while the County has achieved significant progress in project implementation, there are areas where project readiness, execution timelines, and data integration can be further strengthened. In particular, some projects reflect delays in commencement or extended implementation periods, largely associated with procurement processes, funding alignment, and ongoing data reconciliation efforts.

The report recommends continued strengthening of project preparation processes, prioritization of completion of ongoing projects, enhancement of data integration systems, and reinforcement of monitoring frameworks to support timely and efficient delivery of development projects.

It is important to note that the figures presented are based on the current consolidated county project dashboard. Ongoing verification and reconciliation of project records, particularly for earlier years of devolution, may lead to further updates of these figures.

INTRODUCTION

2. INTRODUCTION

The County Government of Bomet undertook a project stock taking exercise to establish a comprehensive and consolidated record of all development projects implemented since the onset of devolution in 2013. This exercise forms part of broader efforts to strengthen public investment management, enhance accountability, and support evidence based planning.

The stock taking process aligns with the requirements of the Kenya Devolution Support Programme Phase II, which emphasizes improved project tracking, financial accountability, and performance reporting within county governments.

The purpose of this report is to account for all projects undertaken across departments, assess their implementation status, and provide a basis for informed decision making and future planning. The report consolidates data from multiple sources, including the county project dashboard, master project datasets, departmental submissions, and project registers covering completed, ongoing, stalled, not started, and under procurement projects.

The scope of the report covers all sectors within the County, including infrastructure, health, education, water, agriculture, and social services. The analysis focuses on project status, financial performance, and emerging implementation considerations across the entire project lifecycle.

The report is structured to present concise findings supported by data, with emphasis on actionable insights, in line with the County's reporting approach. Continuous data verification and consolidation is ongoing, particularly for earlier years of devolution.

OBJECTIVES OF THE STOCK TAKING EXERCISE

The project stock-taking exercise was guided by the following objectives:

- i. To establish a comprehensive and accurate inventory of all projects implemented by the County Government of Bomet from 2013 to date.
- ii. To assess the implementation status and progress of projects, including completed, ongoing, stalled, not started, and under procurement projects.
- iii. To verify the existence, condition, and functionality of projects based on available records and supporting documentation.
- iv. To analyze financial performance in terms of budget allocation, expenditure, and absorption across projects.
- v. To identify challenges affecting project implementation and provide a basis for informed decision making, planning, and resource allocation.

METHODOLOGY

The project stock taking exercise adopted a structured approach combining data consolidation, validation, and analysis.

Data collection was undertaken through review of the county project dashboard, consolidated master project dataset, departmental submissions, and project registers covering completed, ongoing, stalled, not started, and under procurement projects.

These sources provided key project details including project code, name, department, financial year, location, status, percentage completion, budget, and expenditure.

Data validation involved cross checking project information across the different datasets to ensure consistency in project identification, status classification, and financial records. Where necessary, discrepancies were reviewed and reconciled to improve reliability and completeness of the consolidated dataset.

Projects were then classified into standard categories, namely completed, ongoing, stalled, not started, and under procurement, to enable uniform analysis across departments.

Data analysis focused on determining overall project status distribution, departmental performance, and financial performance in terms of budget allocation and utilization.

Descriptive statistics were used to summarize findings and support interpretation.

The methodology was designed to ensure that the stock taking results are evidence based, consistent, and aligned with reporting requirements for performance monitoring and decision making. Continuous data verification and consolidation is ongoing, particularly for earlier years of devolution.

SUMMARY OF FINDINGS

5.1 Overall County Project Status and Financial Performance

The project stock taking exercise established a total of 2,786 projects implemented by the County Government of Bomet across all departments between 2013 and 2026.

The analysis is based on projects captured within the current consolidated county project dataset and reflects records that have been reviewed and verified at the time of reporting.

The total estimated budget for the projects identified is KSh 9,439,774,472, of which KSh 7,862,766,233 has been spent based on available supporting documentation.

These figures represent projects for which records have been consolidated and verified, while additional documentation for earlier years of devolution is still being traced, reviewed, and integrated into the dataset.

It is important to note that these figures are based on the current consolidated county project dashboard. Ongoing verification and reconciliation of project records, particularly for earlier years of devolution, is being undertaken and the figures may be updated as additional documentation is reviewed.

In terms of implementation status, the majority of projects have been completed, reflecting significant progress in service delivery and infrastructure development. A smaller proportion of projects are ongoing, stalled, not started, or under procurement, indicating areas where continued follow up and implementation support is required.

Visualization of project status further confirms the dominance of completed projects relative to other categories.

Analysis of budget distribution across departments indicates that a significant share of resources is concentrated in infrastructure intensive sectors, particularly Roads, Public Works and Transport, Water, Sanitation and Environment, and Lands, Housing and Urban Planning. This reflects the County's strategic focus on infrastructure as a foundation for service delivery and economic development.

The findings indicate that while the County has achieved a high level of project completion, some projects remain at different stages of implementation. These include projects with delayed commencement, extended implementation timelines, and those requiring additional follow up to ensure completion and operationalization.

The financial analysis highlights the importance of continued strengthening of the linkage between planning, budgeting, and implementation to support timely project execution and effective service delivery.

5.2 Departmental Analysis

5.2.1 Education, Youth, Sports and Vocational Training

The Department of Education, Youth, Sports and Vocational Training is a key driver of social development within the County, with investments focused on Early Childhood Development Education, Vocational Training Centres, youth empowerment, and sports infrastructure.

A total of 470 projects were identified and reviewed within the department over the period 2013 to 2026. Of these, 402 projects (85.5 percent) have been completed, reflecting strong implementation performance and sustained investment in expanding access to education and training facilities across the County.

However, 46 projects (9.8 percent) are ongoing, indicating that a proportion of investments are yet to be finalized. While some of these projects are at advanced stages of completion, others exhibit slower progress, suggesting variations in implementation efficiency.

In addition, 4 projects are stalled, while 10 projects are under procurement and 8 projects have not started. The presence of these categories highlights gaps in project readiness, procurement timelines, and execution planning. In particular, projects that have not commenced despite being planned point to delays in approvals, contracting, or resource mobilization.

Analysis of project trends suggests that while the department demonstrates strong capacity in delivering completed projects, challenges remain in ensuring timely transition from planning to execution and in maintaining consistent progress across all ongoing projects.

Overall, the department shows high performance in project delivery. However, improved emphasis on project preparedness, timely procurement, and continuous monitoring is necessary to enhance completion rates and ensure efficient utilization of allocated resources.

5.2.2 Water, Sanitation, Environment, Natural Resources and Climate Change

The Department of Water, Sanitation, Environment, Natural Resources and Climate Change represents one of the strongest performing sectors in the County, with investments focused on water supply systems, water pans, spring protection, borehole development, and strategic utility infrastructure.

A total of 523 projects were identified and reviewed within the department over the period from 2014/2015 to 2024/2025, with a cumulative budget of KSh 1,924,511,503.96 . Of these, 513 projects (98.1 percent) have been completed, while 10 projects (1.9 percent) are ongoing, and no projects are explicitly classified as stalled.

This exceptionally high completion rate indicates strong implementation capacity within the department, particularly in delivering water infrastructure projects across the County. Key areas of investment include water supply networks, which form the largest share of projects, followed by water pans, spring protection works, and borehole development.

The analysis further shows that investment is geographically concentrated in Bomet East, Chepalungu, and Sotik, which together account for a significant share of the total project portfolio . This reflects targeted efforts to address water access challenges in high-demand areas.

Despite the strong performance, a number of emerging issues are evident. The presence of ongoing projects, though small in number, requires close follow-up to ensure timely completion and commissioning. In addition, gaps in project documentation, including incomplete dashboard fields such as images and remarks, affect the completeness of reporting and verification.

The findings also suggest that while project delivery is strong, greater emphasis is required on sustainability and post-completion management. Without structured operation and maintenance systems, there is a risk that completed water infrastructure may not deliver long-term benefits.

Overall, the department demonstrates excellent performance in project implementation. However, strengthening monitoring systems, improving data completeness, and institutionalizing maintenance and sustainability frameworks will be critical in ensuring that investments translate into reliable and sustained water service delivery.

5.2.3 Roads, Public Works and Transport

The Department of Roads, Public Works and Transport manages one of the largest and most resource-intensive project portfolios in the County, with investments focused on road construction, routine maintenance, bridges, culverts, and transport infrastructure.

A total of 676 projects were reviewed within the department, with a recorded investment of KES 2,888,935,799.75. The project portfolio is dominated by roads maintenance and improvement works, followed by bridges and drainage structures.

The department also accounts for the largest share of total budget allocation across all sectors, reflecting the capital intensive nature of road infrastructure investments.

Based on normalized status classification, 561 projects (83.0 percent) have been completed, indicating strong implementation performance across the portfolio. A further 66 projects (9.8 percent) are ongoing or committed, while 1 project (0.1 percent) is recorded as stalled. In addition, 48 projects (7.1 percent) remain unclassified due to incomplete status or financial year information.

The department accounts for the highest number of projects across all sectors, reflecting sustained County investment in improving connectivity and access to services. A significant proportion of these projects are routine road maintenance interventions distributed across multiple wards and financial years.

Analysis of the portfolio indicates that completed projects dominate, particularly routine maintenance works and smaller infrastructure interventions such as culverts and bridges. This reflects strong implementation capacity in executing decentralized and repetitive works across the County.

However, the data also highlights areas where implementation and data management processes can be further strengthened. Several projects are recorded as ongoing with low or zero physical progress and limited expenditure captured in the current dataset, suggesting delays in commencement, procurement processes, or funding alignment. In addition, at least one major infrastructure project is recorded as stalled with a significant allocated budget but limited progress, indicating the need for enhanced management of high value projects.

The presence of 48 unclassified records further highlights the need to strengthen data completeness, particularly in status, financial year, and location fields. These legacy entries may affect accuracy of performance reporting if not fully validated and updated.

The structure of the roads portfolio, characterized by a large number of small and medium scale projects, increases complexity in monitoring, coordination, and reporting. While this enables wide geographic coverage, it also presents opportunities to further strengthen consistency in tracking progress across projects.

The department demonstrates strong performance in project delivery, with completed projects accounting for the majority of classified records. Strengthening project monitoring systems, improving project initiation processes, and addressing data gaps, particularly among unclassified records, will be important in enhancing efficiency, accountability, and the reliability of dashboard reporting.

5.2.4 Medical and Health Services

The Department of Medical and Health Services plays a critical role in improving access to healthcare through investments in dispensaries, health centres, maternity units, laboratories, and sub county hospital infrastructure.

The project portfolio is characterized by a wide distribution of small to medium-scale health infrastructure projects, particularly dispensaries and maternity units, alongside a number of higher value investments in sub county hospitals and specialized facilities. A substantial proportion of these projects have been completed, indicating strong efforts to expand healthcare access across the County.

However, the analysis reveals notable implementation challenges. Several projects are recorded as stalled despite having achieved partial physical progress, with completion levels ranging between 45 percent and 85 percent but with no recorded expenditure . This suggests possible interruptions in funding, contractor disengagement, or weaknesses in project follow up mechanisms.

In addition, a number of ongoing projects, including high value hospital infrastructure and radiology units, are reported with significant levels of completion but without corresponding financial expenditure captured in the dataset. This raises concerns regarding data completeness, financial reporting, or delays in disbursement and payment processes.

The presence of both small-scale completed projects and partially implemented larger projects indicates a pattern where the department performs well in delivering low-cost, decentralized health facilities but faces challenges in executing and sustaining more complex and capital-intensive investments.

From a service delivery perspective, incomplete or stalled health projects have direct implications on access to care, particularly in underserved areas where communities rely on these facilities. The delay in completion of such projects limits the intended impact of investments in improving maternal health services, outpatient care, and diagnostic capacity.

Overall, the department demonstrates strong commitment to expanding healthcare infrastructure, with a high number of completed projects. However, strengthening project financing continuity, improving monitoring systems, and ensuring timely completion of partially implemented facilities will be critical in translating infrastructure investments into effective and reliable health service delivery.

5.2.5 Agriculture, Livestock, Fisheries and Cooperatives

The Department of Agriculture, Livestock, Fisheries and Cooperatives plays a central role in supporting livelihoods and economic development within the County through investments in agricultural production systems, cooperative development, livestock infrastructure, and value addition facilities.

The project portfolio reflects a strong emphasis on strengthening agricultural value chains, with investments in dairy cooperative infrastructure, milk coolers, processing plants, irrigation systems, fish farming, livestock facilities such as cattle dips and slaughterhouses, and farmer support initiatives.

According to departmental submissions, a total of 180 projects were reviewed within the sector, of which 174 projects are completed, while 3 are ongoing and 3 are stalled. The completed projects are largely small scale infrastructure and cooperative support initiatives, which demonstrate relatively high completion rates due to their limited scope and resource requirements.

The analysis further shows that the department has consistently invested in cooperative based models, including multipurpose cooperative societies, dairy units, and farmer organizations, which are critical for aggregation, marketing, and value addition. This approach supports increased farmer incomes and enhances market access.

However, the consolidated dataset highlights areas where implementation processes can be further strengthened. Several high value projects, including processing plants, cooperative facilities, and agricultural infrastructure, are recorded as ongoing or stalled with limited or no expenditure captured in the current dataset, despite significant budget allocations. This suggests the need for continued strengthening of project execution processes, funding alignment, and contractor mobilization.

In addition, some projects remain not started despite being planned and budgeted, indicating the need to further strengthen project readiness processes, including approvals, prioritization, and implementation planning.

A notable pattern within the department is the contrast between strong performance in smaller, decentralized projects such as cattle dips, cooperative support, and farm level interventions, and slower progress in large scale, capital intensive projects such as processing plants and major agricultural facilities. This suggests opportunities to further strengthen management of complex and high value investments.

From an economic perspective, delays in completion of agricultural projects may limit the full realization of benefits for farmers, particularly in areas of productivity, value addition, and income generation. Ensuring timely completion and operationalization of these projects will be important in maximizing their impact.

The department demonstrates strong commitment to supporting agricultural development and farmer livelihoods. Continued strengthening of project readiness, timely execution of high value investments, and enhanced monitoring systems will be essential in maximizing the economic impact of agricultural projects and ensuring sustainability of outcomes.

5.2.6 Finance, Economic Planning and ICT

The Department of Finance, Economic Planning and ICT plays a central role in enabling governance, planning, and service delivery through investments in information and communication technology systems, network infrastructure, and strategic support facilities.

The project portfolio is largely composed of ICT-related investments, including local area networks, internet connectivity, structured cabling, security systems, and installation of communication infrastructure across various departments and locations within the County. In addition, the department has supported implementation of high-value projects linked to service delivery and economic development.

Analysis of the dataset indicates that the majority of projects are recorded as completed, reflecting strong implementation performance in rolling out ICT infrastructure and support systems across the County.

However, a critical issue emerges in relation to financial reporting. A significant number of projects, including those marked as fully completed, have no recorded expenditure despite having allocated budgets . This suggests gaps in financial data capture, reporting, or integration between project implementation records and financial management systems.

In addition, the dataset includes high-value projects, such as infrastructure and value addition facilities, that are either ongoing or completed without corresponding financial expenditure reflected. This raises concerns regarding the reliability of financial reporting and the ability to accurately assess budget utilization and value for money.

The pattern observed indicates that while the department demonstrates strong capacity in implementing ICT and support projects, there is a disconnect between physical project completion and financial data recording. This limits transparency and weakens the effectiveness of monitoring and evaluation processes.

Given that the department is responsible for planning and financial oversight functions, these gaps have broader implications for county-wide project tracking and reporting systems. Strengthening integration between financial management systems and project monitoring frameworks will be critical in ensuring accurate, real-time reporting and informed decision making.

Overall, the department shows strong performance in delivering system-based projects. However, improving financial data completeness, enhancing system integration, and ensuring alignment between project implementation and expenditure reporting are essential for strengthening accountability and governance across the County.

5.2.7 Lands, Housing and Urban Planning

The Department of Lands, Housing and Urban Planning plays a strategic role in enabling public service delivery through land acquisition, urban infrastructure development, and planning of public facilities across the County.

The project portfolio is characterized by a strong focus on land acquisition for public use, including sites for Early Childhood Development centres, health facilities, markets, ward offices, and other public infrastructure. In addition, the department has implemented urban development projects such as road construction and upgrading, stormwater drainage systems, market infrastructure, sanitation facilities, and housing-related improvements.

A total of 194 projects were reviewed within the department over the period from 2013/2014 to 2025/2026, of which 191 projects (98.5 percent) have been completed, while 3 projects (1.5 percent) are ongoing . This reflects a very high level of implementation performance and consistency in project delivery.

The dominance of land acquisition projects, which account for a large proportion of the portfolio, indicates a strategic approach to securing land for future development and expansion of public services. This has enabled the County to establish infrastructure across multiple sectors, including health, education, water, and markets.

Urban infrastructure investments, including road upgrades, drainage works, and market development, further demonstrate the department's role in supporting urbanization and improving economic activity within towns and trading centres.

Despite the strong performance, a few emerging issues are evident. Some ongoing projects, particularly high-value land acquisitions, have incomplete or missing financial data, which affects full assessment of budget utilization . In addition, the large number of small-scale land acquisition transactions, while effective in expanding public infrastructure, may present challenges in long-term planning, documentation, and asset management.

The findings suggest that while the department demonstrates excellent performance in project implementation, greater emphasis is required on consolidation of land records, integration of financial data, and strategic planning of land use to maximize long-term value.

Overall, the department exhibits strong delivery capacity and plays a foundational role in enabling development across sectors. Strengthening data management systems and enhancing strategic land use planning will be essential in sustaining and optimizing the impact of these investments.

5.2.8 Trade, Energy, Tourism, Investment and Industry

The Department of Trade, Energy, Tourism, Investment and Industry supports economic activity through investments targeting small and medium enterprises, informal sector operations, and local market infrastructure.

The project portfolio is dominated by small to medium scale interventions, including boda boda shades, shoe shiner sheds, Jua Kali sheds, and installation of floodlights across trading centres. These projects are widely distributed across wards, reflecting an approach centered on equitable access to basic economic infrastructure.

A large proportion of projects are marked as completed, indicating consistent delivery of decentralized interventions. However, several projects, particularly Jua Kali sheds, are recorded as stalled despite showing full completion percentages. This points to inconsistencies in status reporting and possible gaps in project closure, functionality, or handover processes .

The concentration of repetitive, low-cost projects suggests a strong focus on immediate livelihood support. While this has likely improved access to working spaces and basic infrastructure for informal sector participants, it limits the scale of economic transformation that can be achieved through such investments.

There is limited evidence of large-scale or value addition projects capable of driving industrial growth, enterprise expansion, or increased competitiveness. This indicates a gap between short-term support interventions and longer-term economic development objectives.

The department has achieved broad outreach and inclusivity in project distribution. Strengthening the mix of investments to include higher impact projects, improving consistency in project reporting, and ensuring functionality of completed facilities will be critical in enhancing economic outcomes.

5.2.9 Gender, Culture and Social Services

The Department of Gender, Culture and Social Services focuses on promoting social inclusion, cultural development, and protection of vulnerable groups through targeted infrastructure and community-based interventions.

The project portfolio is relatively small, comprising seven projects implemented between 2014 and 2024. Of these, six projects have been completed, while one project, the construction of Makimeny Library, is stalled with minimal progress and no recorded expenditure .

The completed projects include construction and renovation of community libraries, development of a Gender Based Violence holding ground, renovation of a cultural centre, and establishment of a film hub. These investments are directly linked to social services, access to information, cultural preservation, and protection of vulnerable populations.

The limited number of projects reflects a targeted approach, focusing on high-impact social infrastructure rather than widespread physical development. This allows for concentrated investment in facilities that support community engagement, learning, and social protection.

The stalled library project highlights challenges in project execution, particularly in procurement or contractor performance. Given the small project portfolio, delays in even a single project significantly affect overall departmental performance.

The department has established clear post-completion actions, including periodic assessment and maintenance of completed facilities, which supports sustainability of investments . However, the effectiveness of these facilities depends on their utilization and continued operational support.

The findings suggest that while the department has achieved high completion rates within its limited portfolio, there is a need to strengthen project continuity and ensure timely completion of pending projects. Expanding the scale of interventions while maintaining focus on vulnerable groups could further enhance social impact.

The department demonstrates focused delivery of social infrastructure. Strengthening implementation consistency and improving project scale will be important in extending the reach and impact of its interventions.

5.2.10 Administration, Public Service and Special Programs

The Department of Administration, Public Service and Special Programs is responsible for strengthening governance structures and service delivery through development of administrative infrastructure, including ward offices, sub county offices, and strategic public facilities.

The project portfolio is largely composed of construction of ward and sub county offices across the County, aimed at decentralizing services and improving access to government functions at the local level.

The analysis shows a mixed performance across projects. While a number of projects have been completed, a significant proportion remain either ongoing or stalled, particularly those initiated in earlier financial years such as 2014/2015. Several ward office projects are recorded as stalled with varying levels of completion, ranging from 20 percent to 80 percent, but with no recorded expenditure .

In addition, multiple projects are categorized as ongoing despite having reached advanced stages of completion, including some exceeding 85 percent progress, yet without corresponding financial records. This points to gaps in project finalization, payment processes, or data reporting.

The presence of long-standing incomplete projects suggests challenges in project execution, contractor management, and follow-up mechanisms. Delays in completing administrative infrastructure limit the effectiveness of decentralization efforts and reduce the intended benefits of improved service delivery at the ward level.

The department also includes high-value projects, such as construction of the Governor's residence, which remain ongoing with substantial progress but without recorded expenditure. This further highlights weaknesses in financial tracking and project closure processes.

The pattern observed indicates that while the department has initiated key governance infrastructure projects, there are significant gaps in completion, monitoring, and financial reporting. The concentration of stalled projects within a single financial period suggests systemic challenges rather than isolated cases.

Strengthening project follow-up, improving contractor accountability, and ensuring alignment between physical progress and financial reporting will be essential in improving performance within the department.

The department plays a critical role in enabling governance and service delivery. Addressing implementation delays and improving project completion rates will be necessary to fully realize the benefits of administrative decentralization.

KEY OBSERVATIONS AND EMERGING ISSUES

The project stock-taking exercise highlights several key observations that reflect both progress made and areas where ongoing improvements are being undertaken across departments. The project status distribution indicates a strong dominance of completed projects relative to other categories, while budget allocation patterns show concentration of resources in infrastructure intensive sectors.

One of the notable observations relates to documentation of projects implemented during the early years of devolution, particularly from 2013 to 2017. In some cases, complete project records, including financial and implementation details, were not readily available within consolidated systems. This reflects the transitional nature of systems during the initial phases of county establishment. Efforts are currently ongoing to trace, verify, and harmonize historical project data across departments.

The analysis also indicates that a number of projects initiated in earlier financial years are still ongoing or have experienced extended implementation timelines. Many of these projects have achieved substantial physical progress, and continued follow-up is being undertaken to ensure their completion and operationalization.

Variations between physical progress and financial reporting were observed in some instances. Certain projects recorded as completed or near completion have limited expenditure data captured in the current dataset. This is largely attributed to ongoing efforts to integrate project records with financial management systems and improve data consolidation.

Projects classified as not started or under procurement highlight the importance of strengthening project readiness processes, including timely approvals, procurement planning, and contractor mobilization. These are areas currently being enhanced to improve transition from planning to implementation.

The wide distribution of projects across wards demonstrates the County's commitment to equitable development. At the same time, it presents opportunities to further strengthen coordination and monitoring mechanisms to improve efficiency and reporting consistency.

The stock-taking process has also provided an opportunity to identify areas for strengthening in data completeness, particularly in relation to legacy records and system integration. Ongoing initiatives to digitize records, standardize reporting formats, and strengthen data management systems are expected to address these areas.

There is also scope to further enhance alignment between planning, budgeting, and implementation processes to ensure that projects are executed within planned timelines and available resources.

Finally, while many projects have been completed, continued focus on functionality, maintenance, and sustainability will be important to ensure that investments deliver long-term benefits to communities.

These observations provide a foundation for strengthening project management systems, improving data quality, and enhancing overall efficiency in project implementation across the County.

RECOMMENDATIONS

In light of the observations from the project stock-taking exercise, the following recommendations are proposed to further strengthen project management, reporting systems, and overall implementation efficiency within the County.

The County should continue ongoing efforts to consolidate and digitize project documentation, particularly for projects implemented during the early years of devolution. Strengthening records management systems will enhance accessibility, accuracy, and reliability of project data for planning and reporting purposes.

There is need to further strengthen integration between project implementation records and financial management systems to ensure consistency between physical progress and expenditure reporting. This will support more accurate tracking of resource utilization and improve accountability.

Enhancing project readiness processes will be important in improving transition from planning to implementation. This includes timely completion of feasibility assessments, approvals, procurement processes, and contractor mobilization to minimize delays in project commencement.

Continued emphasis should be placed on follow-up and completion of ongoing projects to ensure that investments are fully realized and projects are brought to operational status within planned timelines.

The County should build on existing monitoring and evaluation frameworks to strengthen tracking of project progress across departments. Improved coordination and regular reporting will enhance visibility of project performance and support timely decision making.

There is also an opportunity to optimize project coordination where interventions are widely distributed across wards, to improve efficiency and maximize impact while maintaining equitable development.

Strengthening alignment between planning, budgeting, and implementation processes will support more effective prioritization of projects and ensure that available resources are matched with execution capacity.

The County is encouraged to continue enhancing sustainability measures for completed projects, including maintenance planning, functionality assessments, and operational support, to ensure long-term service delivery and value for investment.

These recommendations are intended to build on the progress already achieved and support continuous improvement in project implementation, data management, and service delivery across the County.

CONCLUSION

The project stock-taking exercise provides a comprehensive overview of development projects implemented by the County Government of Bomet since the onset of devolution. The findings indicate substantial progress in project delivery across departments, with a high proportion of projects completed and significant investments made in key sectors including infrastructure, health, education, water, and economic development. The distribution of projects and financial resources further reflects a strong focus on infrastructure as a key driver of service delivery.

The exercise has also served as an important step in consolidating project data, verifying implementation status, and strengthening the County's project management and reporting systems. It highlights ongoing efforts to harmonize records, improve data completeness, and enhance integration between planning, budgeting, and implementation processes.

While some projects remain at different stages of implementation and documentation for earlier years continues to be consolidated, the trajectory reflects steady progress and commitment to service delivery. The insights generated from this exercise provide a strong foundation for improving efficiency, strengthening coordination, and enhancing accountability in future project implementation.

Moving forward, continued emphasis on data management, timely completion of projects, and sustainability of investments will be critical in ensuring that development initiatives translate into lasting benefits for the people of Bomet County.

The stock-taking exercise therefore represents not only a reflection of past performance but also a strategic tool to support informed planning and improved delivery of development outcomes across the County.
